Sponsored by the Pony Chung Foundation

The Seventh PONY CHUNG Fellowship

for Young Korean Studies Scholars

1. PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

The field of Korean Studies has been quantitatively and qualitatively progressing internationally, with new researchers continually emerging. It is important to provide opportunities for young international scholars to visit Korea to explore new themes and increase their expertise in Korean Studies. A strong research environment and opportunities to collaborate with domestic researchers during their visit can enhance international scholars' research results.

With support from the Pony Chung Foundation, Korea University's Research Institute of Korean Studies (RIKS) established the 'Pony Chung Fellowship' for Young Korean Studies Scholars in 2016. The goal of this program is to provide young international scholars in the field of Korean Studies with financial support, a suitable research infrastructure, and a platform on which they can share ideas and research outcomes with others in the field. Through this program, scholars are able to develop their topics and further expand their research, thereby contributing to the overall development and globalization of Korean Studies. Prospective participants are invited to submit their applications.
